The 2021 Master Plan

In 2021 the Mendham Golf & Tennis Club approved a master plan, presented by Robert McNeil, ASGCA, of the Northeast Golf Company. Robert McNeil, alongside contractors at NMP Golf, have now completed nearly all of the proposed improvements to the course. One of the major projects that has yet to be completed is the work on the 10th hole, improving the par 5's aesthetics, strategy, agronomy, and playability. This document explains the proposed enhancements to the 10th hole, along with the planning and goals that have guided these proposals.

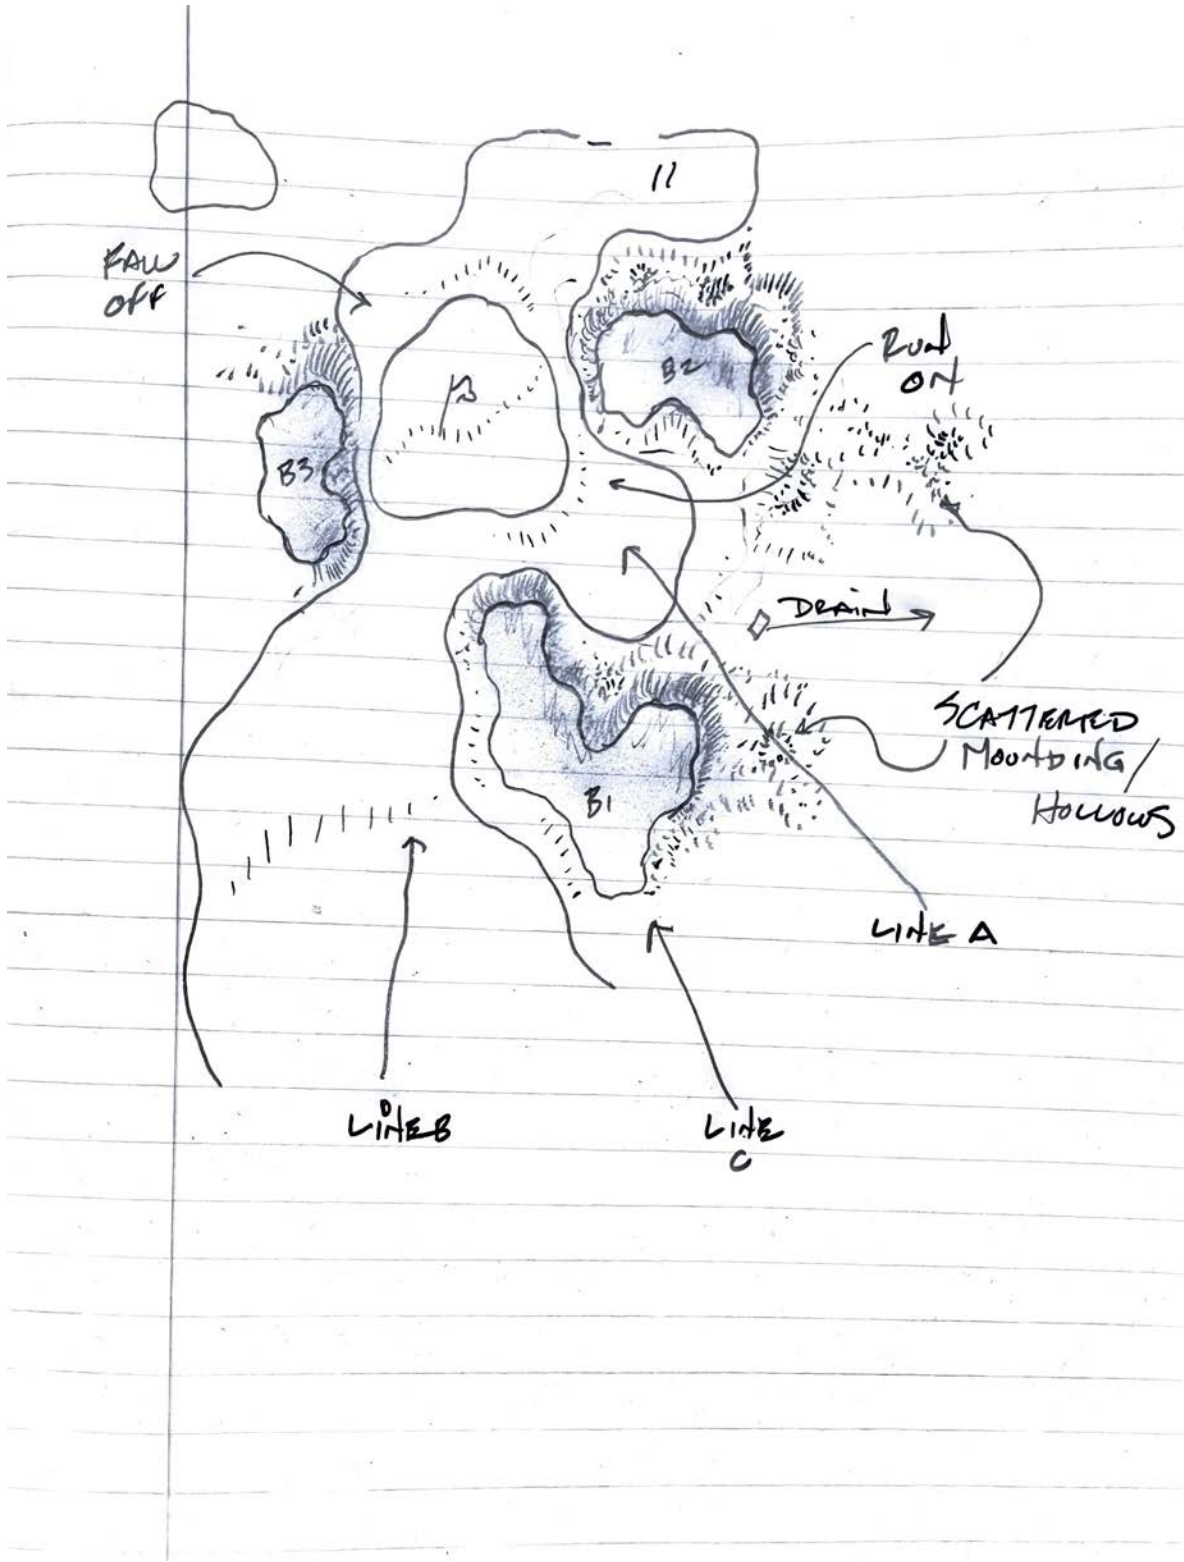

Goals and Planning Phase

Multiple revisions have been made to the proposed improvements to the 10th hole since the initial 2021 master plan. Proposed bunkers have been moved and reduced in size to aid in maintenance, to fit the style of the improvements completed on the rest of the course, and to ensure that the adjustments have the highest possible impact on the playability, challenge, and experience for Club members.

The plans are guided by the goal to improve conditioning while reducing necessary maintenance, and to provide more strategic lines of play into the par-5 for all skill levels. The realization of these goals was done through an iterative design process which included numerous site visits and communication with key personnel, eventually landing on the concept shown in the sketch to the right, drawn by Robert McNeil in April, 2025.

What Will Change?

The major structural changes to the hole will occur within 200 yards of the green, with the most significant alterations happening at the immediate green surrounds. These changes include:

- A. Reconstructing and reshaping the three fairway bunkers 75-150 yards from the green.
- B. The removal of approximately 10 trees to improve turf health. The removal of these trees will incidentally allow for new, strategic lines of play and improved views into the 10th green.
- C. The addition of a new, large bunker, spanning nearly 40 yards, beginning nearly 30 yards short of the green.
- D. Fairway expansions to allow more angles of play from the left side of the hole, as well as an access fairway to the right of the new, large bunker to allow heroic run-on shots from the right.
- E. Reshaping green surrounds, eliminating the back left greenside bunker, and reshaping and slightly repositioning the remaining greenside bunkers in congruence with the new angles of play from the fairway.
- F. Tying the existing 11th tee to the 10th green with continuous short grass, doubling as a pitch area for shots that miss the green.

New Visuals

With all reshaped bunkers, including one new large bunker short of the green, the hole will soon stylistically match the rest of the recent renovations completed at Mendham Golf & Tennis Club. New bunkers, expanded fairway and pitch areas, and mounding and tall fescue tied to hole 11 will create a more dramatic and visually engaging golf hole on this flatter section of the Mendham property.

Improved Agronomy

The introduction of tall fescue and new drainage lines to manage flooding will improve surrounding turf conditions while reducing maintenance strain. Additionally, removing a number of cramped trees to the right of the hole will improve airflow, reduce fallen leaves in the area, and expose the beautiful existing maple tree more fully, making it a standout tree and a centerpiece of the newly renovated par-5.

New Strategy, Challenge, and Playability

All of these improvements will improve strategy, challenge, and playability. Players in position to reach the green in two shots will now face heightened opportunity and temptation with the cleared view to the green, however, they will face equally heightened challenge with the new sprawling bunker short of the green. A well struck shot can utilize the new run-on fairway to the right, but any mis-hit can cause disaster.

Players who are unable to reach the green face greater decision making with wider fairway – play closer to the bunkers for a better angle, or play away to the left to reduce the risk on the second shot.

Further, by expanding pitch areas and repositioning greenside bunkers, short shots around the green will produce greater mental challenge for highly skilled players, and greater access for those who prefer to putt around the green.

The proposed improvements to hole 10 at Mendham Golf & Tennis Club have been meticulously planned to improve conditioning, strategy, playability, and aesthetics. Construction of these improvements will make hole 10 stylistically match with the other recent adjustments made at the Club in line with the 2021 master plan, and will add another hole to the long list of incredible golf holes at Mendham Golf & Tennis Club.
